At a similar event in Sacramento in February Professor William L. Prosser, author of "Prosser On Torts" and "The Judicial Humorist," entertained the Board of Governors and local alumni with samples of his renowned wit.

LAW STUDENT BECOMES MOTHER

A law student became a mother in the middle of the academic year at Hastings. She is Sally Kendrick who, on December 13, 1966, gave birth to an eight pound, six ounce baby boy. The father is Thomas Perry Kendrick, '66, who is with Hoge, Fenton Jones and Appel in San Jose.

CLASS OF '66 WELCOMED TO 'BAR'

The Alumni Association sponsored a most successful cocktail reception in honor of the Fall, 1966 Bar Admittees at the Domino Penthouse in San Francisco on December 22, 1966.

This was the Second Annual Bar Admittee Reception, and a very congenial time was had by all of the over 100 admittees, alumni, administration, faculty and guests.

Alumni President Martin Field, '41, one of the first to arrive, was full of the Seasons Good Cheer, and got the reception under way by turning this no-host affair into an apparent misnomer. Among the coterie of youngsters, seeing old friends and offering congratulations and advice to the new admittees were Max Jamison '45, John Langer '34, Marvel Shore '45, Harold Dobbs '42, Judge Gerald O'Gara '26,

MARTIN FIELD, '35

The Alumni Association's president this year is Martin Field, '35, senior partner of Field, DeGoff and Rieman, San Francisco. Mr. Field is also chairman of the National Board of Directors of the National Aid to Visually Handicapped and the Chairman of the San Francisco Mayor's World Fair Citizens' Committee.

HASTINGS HOSTS LAW REVIEWS

Hastings hosted student delegates from 100 law schools throughout the country who attended the 13th National Conference of Law Reviews at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel in San Francisco on March 16-18.

In addition to attending a convivial cocktail reception sponsored by the Alumni Association, the delegates listened to remarks by psychiatrist Bernard L. Diamond, M.D.; B. E. Witkin, the legal wit and author; and Professors Richard R. Powell and William L. Prosser of the Hastings' faculty.

and Mrs. O'Gara. Judge O'Gara was just appointed to the Superior Court Bench in San Francisco.

Among the most recent Alumni imbibing in the festive nature of the occasion were William C. Carr '62, Ron Vernon '63, Jim Gustin '63, Rene Rubin '63, Don Humphreys '64, Greg Archibald '64, Jerry Marks '64, Les Paine '65, Bob Hyerle '65, Roger Kensil '65, Bill Ayers '65, and Richard Hippard '65.

Dean and Mrs. Art Sammis and Assistant Dean Marv Anderson and Joe Munster all bore the satisfied grins of Cheshire cats. Good reason too, Hastings had the best percentage of first time graduates passing the bar of all California law schools, for the fall '66 bar examination, a real tribute to the Class of '66. —Jerome Marks

Report to the Stockholders

It is customary in corporate enterprises for a "Report to the Stockholders" to be made at varying intervals. While Hastings College of the Law does not fall into the usual corporate category, it is believed that each of you is a "stockholder." As an alumnus you have an interest in your College; as a lawyer you have a vital interest in the type of and thoroughness of legal education and the maintenance of the high standards of the profession; as a human being you have an interest in what is going on—in short, at least a mild bump of curiosity.

The New Building

During the past scholastic year, that of 1965-66, much has been accomplished on the positive side. Hastings has grown quite a bit since its present quarters were dedicated in 1953. In fact, in this present scholastic year we will be using part of the building at 55 Hyde Street to accommodate some of your professors and to provide office space for the Associated Students. The present building was designed to serve a student body half the size of the present one and the need for additional space has been recognized. The property now occupied by the Iris Hotel, immediately adjacent to the present law school building on Hyde Street, has been acquired by the State and sufficient funds have been released to permit the preparation of working drawings and plans for an addition that will practically double existing useable space. With the passage of the construction bond issue this addition is assured. It is hoped that work may be commenced early in July of 1967. Included in the building planning is a rather thorough remodeling of the present structure. Total cost is estimated to be in excess of 2 million dollars and a Federal grant of $759,798 has been secured to defray part of the cost.

1200 Limit

It has been determined that the optimum size for our law school, even with the contemplated addition, is approximately 1200. This means an entering class of about 450. This size entering class is by no means a pipe dream. Prior to the closing of applications for admission to the September 1965 entering class a total of 1559 applications had been received. As seating capacity for this class was limited to slightly over four hundred it was necessary to exercise a degree of selectivity not previously applied. 426 first year students were admitted and the selectivity proved itself as the attrition rate was 17.6%, the lowest in recent history. We should have even lower attrition rates in coming years and increased excellence in our graduates of the future. Higher admission requirements were necessarily placed into effect and these requirements will rise even higher as applications for admission increase in number. For the 1966-67 entering class there were 1639 applications and the end of this rising trend is not in sight.

A Federal grant of $5,000 has been received to augment library purchases and an additional grant of in excess of $10,000 is expected at any time. This is particularly pleasing as the larger student body is making an increase in library size imperative.

Poor Alumni Contact

Despite the fact that much has been accomplished last year and during the years before that, there remain a number of things to be done, a number of conditions to be corrected. To my mind the greatest lack of Hastings College of the Law lies in its relationship with its alumni. We have many loyal and enthusiastic graduates but, at the same time, there are far too many who have taken their legal training at Hastings and now exhibit little interest in it. About half of our more than three thousand living alumni are members of the Alumni Association in name only. They attend no meetings, pay no dues, and, for the most part seem to have forgotten that Hastings exists. Much can be done to bring to all of our alumni a feeling that they are part of the institution, a very valuable part, whose interest is essential if we are ever to become, not just the best in the West, but the best anywhere.

Undoubtedly a measure of this lack of interest has resulted from the failure of those of us at the College to "pass the word," to keep you informed of what is happening, of what is going to happen, of what is needed and what can be done about it. This we shall attempt to do from here on out. This report is merely the first of many which you will receive.

Insofar as Hastings is concerned, the legislature has furnished adequate support in the form of building appropriations and total budget for operations, including salaries. We have not had to ask the alumni for supplementary funds for these purposes and have never done so, nor do we intend to do so.

Students Need Help

There are two areas, however, in which Hastings College of the Law is presently deficient. The first of these is in financial aid to the students. The costs of education involve more than the fees charged for admission. Some of our students must have assistance in the nature of scholarships because, as you well know, the pressure of studies at a school such as ours precludes very much outside work. Some of our alumni have been very generous in setting up scholarships either in the form of large contributions with the interest therefrom providing the student aid, or in the form of annual contributions of smaller amounts. These scholarships have done a lot of good and we need more of them. They are however, scholarships and their very name implies that the recipient exhibit some considerable measure of academic merit. They are not designed to take care of the bulk of students who require some form of aid. These are the students who will make good lawyers and be a credit to the profession if they can just find the money to finish school. What these men are seeking is loans.

Loan Money Wanted

At Hastings we have been fortunate in receiving support from the ABA which will permit our students to borrow some $43,000; this sum for all practical purposes was exhausted three weeks after school opened. In addition to the ABA loan program we deposited College Funds with the United Student Aid Fund as a reserve. This permitted our students to borrow $12.50 for every dollar in that reserve. It gave us a total lending power of $137,500 but this is a revolving fund. With our students it does not revolve very rapidly and we definitely need additional funds for deposit in our reserve. While scholarships are wonderful things I'd like to point out that a $10,000 scholarship fund will generate about $500 a year for a scholarship for one student. That same sum, deposited in our reserve account would permit 125 students to borrow $1,000 each.

Library Needs Aid

The other area in which Hastings is deficient lies in the library. It should be noted that while Hastings College of the Law ranks 4th in size of student body among single division law schools and 9th when multiple division schools are included, it is far down the list in library size.

The Federal grants I mentioned made it possible to begin needed increases in library coverage. Much remains to be done. If our law school is to become a truly great one, a law school which will match in other areas the quality of its faculty, the library must be improved. Specifically, much state material is lacking, coverage in certain specialized areas does not exist, and treatise and digest material should be augmented. Our collection on foreign law is, for all practical purposes, a vacant space on the shelves. Previous policy has been to have a working California library and to utilize nearby libraries, admittedly excellent, for broader coverage. Law books are the tools of the lawyer's profession and it is incumbent on this school to provide the appropriate, proper and necessary tools. We can no longer be content to borrow from our neighbor.

With closer College and alumni relationship and the passing of the word perhaps we can achieve most, if not all of these goals. It is possible and certainly by no means unreasonable to assume that College and alumni can work together in this effort.

The New Addition: TWO POINTS OF VIEW

In 1953, the University of California built the present home of the Hastings College of the Law at McAllister and Hyde Streets to accommodate 550 students. (See page 6 for a history of previous locations.) The existing building is now operating at 200% of capacity. To ease the over crowding, the University has purchased the property on the southeast corner of Hyde and Golden Gate now occupied by the Iris Hotel. The fourth floor of the new building, designed by architects Masten and Hurd, extends four feet beyond the property lines on Hyde Street and Golden Gate Avenue. This unique feature, the architects indicate, not only will give a feeling of continuity with the existing building, but will offer a pleasing visual interplay of light and shadow, solid surfaces and glass.
